The Day Treatment Program at Jefferson Hills is carefully designed to meet the emotional, behavioral and academic needs of each student and offers a rich academic curriculum including center-based activities, social skills and experiential learning. The program currently serves adolescents ages 13-18, and may expand to serve primary school students in the future. Students participate in weekly individual, group, and/or family therapy. A comprehensive behavior management plan and incentive strategies support the program and ensure that students can acquire the necessary skills to be successful in his or her home school.
